Purpose

The partners looked to a growing national movement and the Coalition for Community Schools for the best examples of cities that have made schools the centers of their communities. Successful models bring together many partners to offer a range of supports and opportunities for youth and families, involving neighbors and building on community assets. Partners work toward ensuring the following shared goals:

- Children are ready to learn when they enter school and everyday thereafter.
- All students learn and achieve to high standards.
- Young people are well prepared for adult roles in the workplace, as parents, and as citizens.
- Families and neighborhoods are safe, supportive, and engaged.
- Parents and community members are involved with the school and their own lifelong learning.

Kiser as a Neighborhood School

Each school develops its own site objectives that reflect the opportunities, assets, and needs of the school members and the neighborhood. All of Dayton's Neighborhood School Centers are evaluated on the ability to progress the following goals:

- Improve student performance.
- Improve quality of life in the neighborhood.
- Attract families with school-aged children to the neighborhood.
- Realign community resources to support youth achievement.
- Sustain leadership and support for Neighborhood School Centers.
- Develop in Dayton a replicable national model.
